About You:

You must be over 18 years of age to adopt or foster a horse from Bear Valley Rescue. Are you adopting/fostering as a "single parent," a family, or a couple? Will more than one person be sharing the responsibilities that accompany horse ownership? Is everyone agreed on his/her responsibilities?

Do you now own any horses:

If so, what are their ages and temperaments?

If you have had horses in the past that you no longer own, please explain under what circumstances you were unable to keep them or re-homed them and what happened to them:

About the horse you would like to adopt/foster:

Are you interested in adopting/fostering a particular age, gender, or breed of horse; is there a particular BVR horse you are interested in? If so, please give the horse's name, and a brief description of why this horse appeals to you. What personality traits are you looking for in a horse (e.g., athletic, quiet, bold, friendly)? Do you have other animals that are a factor in your decision to foster/adopt (e.g., are you wanting your horse to bond with another horse, to be submissive or dominant)?

Why do you want to adopt or foster a horse from Bear Valley Rescue:

What are your future plans for the horse you adopt:

Are you able to commit to the horse for the next 5, 10, 20 years, or more? What are your plans for the horse if the horse cannot be ridden due to injury or illness? What specific knowledge do you have about caring for an older horse?

Are you able to train your horse, or do you have a trainer whom you trust to work with you and your horse:

If you have previous horse experience, please provide a brief summary. What is your philosophy in the training of a horse?

How would you rate your horse experience:

- This will be my first horse
- I have owned or still own at least one other horse.
- I am experienced with horses and knowledgeable about their care and handling

Please read and acknowledge understanding of the following considerations in adopting/fostering a horse by checking the following:

- 'Rescue' Horses: Our horses, as with any horse, may have issues that need to be overcome - especially if they have been abused or neglected - and need to learn to trust humans; they may have physical conditions that require particular care; they may not have had any handling or only minimal training. Do you have the time, finances, and skill to work with and maintain a horse?
- Commitment: You must be able and willing to spend consistent, extensive time with your horse. Note, too, that a horse can live for over 30 years. Can you commit to care for your horse for its lifetime? What will you do with your horse if your circumstances change?
- Expense: The initial cost of your horse is only the beginning: you must be prepared to pay for tack, feed, boarding, vet care, worming, shots, farrier, hauling – it can add up to a LOT of money, and a lot of these costs are recurring, some several times in just one year.
- Knowledge: Even well-trained horses can be dangerous, especially if you do not have the skill and confidence to handle them. Consider carefully your desire to adopt an animal that has little experience or training.

Do you own or have access to a horse trailer and truck should your horse require transport?

Who is your veterinarian or clinic?

Who is your farrier?

About Your Space:

Will you board your horse or do you own or lease property for the horse?

Where is the property located? If you plan to board your horse at a stable or on land owned by someone other than yourself, please supply the name and contact information for that facility/property. Bear Valley Rescue may visit these premises as a condition to granting adoption or fostering to an applicant. If you board your horse or lease space for it, how often are you able to visit your horse?

Provide at least 1 reference:

This should be someone is not related to you and who has known you for at least 5 years and preferably someone involved in the horse world. Let this person know that we will be contacting them on your behalf. Include their phone number and email.

Please read and acknowledge your understanding of our policy on any horse adopted or fostered from Bear Valley Rescue by initialing the following:

Do you intend or hope to breed the horse you are adopting or fostering?

Unless written consent is given by Bear Valley Rescue, mares are adopted or fostered on the condition that they not be bred. Colts are released on the condition they must be gelded as soon as possible and not be used for breeding.

___ I have read, understand, and agree to this condition for any horse adopted or fostered from Bear Valley Rescue.

Horses adopted from Bear Valley Rescue are released on the condition that they never be sold at auction or for slaughter.

___ I have read, understand, and agree to this condition for any horse adopted or fostered from Bear Valley Rescue.

Please note for adoption purposes that if ownership of the horse is transferred, all these above conditions must follow the horse to its new home and Bear Valley Rescue be advised of the transfer of ownership.

___ I understand and agree that these conditions will be transferred to the horse's new owner should it become necessary to re-home a horse adopted from Bear Valley Rescue and to advise Bear Valley Rescue of the transfer.

Fostered Horses: Any horse fostered from Bear Valley Rescue remains the legal property of Bear Valley Rescue and may not be sold, transferred, or re-homed without the prior written consent of Bear Valley Rescue Society.

___ Should circumstances arise that prevent me from continuing to foster a horse from Bear Valley Rescue, I will notify and return the horse to Bear Valley Rescue immediately, which remains the legal owner of any horse released for fostering purposes.
